Miniature golf courses see green again

Story and Photos By Susana Choy
Lifestyles Editor

"Through the log, off the rock and in the hole," cried one miniature golfer to the other, daring his partner to hit a hole in one. She swings and tentatively watches her orange golf ball wend its way through the log, bounce off the rock and straight into the hole for a thoroughly unexpected hole in one. She cocks her head toward him — one eyebrow raised, a smile on her face — to see her partner standing slack jawed, in disbelief. They both burst into laughter.

Miniature golfing is very much a family oriented recreation, offering players at least 18 opportunities to improve their putting, and laugh at themselves and their golfing buddies. And many do.

The Castle Park of the '80s sported two miniature golf courses. It took more than 10 years since the park closed for another course, Jungle River, to be built. With the appearance and popularity of Glow Putt, it seems the sport might be undergoing a slow resurgence.

Tech. Sgt. Andrew J. Leonhard, noncommissioned officer-in-charge, Internal Information, 15th Airlift Wing, decided to do something unusual and hit all four miniature golf courses on Father's Day. "I had a great time. It was my first Hawaii miniature golf experience."

Each of the five 18-hole courses on the island offers something unique. The Bellows Golf Shack Miniature Golf Course located at Bellows Air Force Base, is set against the ocean and, as it is open only to Department of Defense cardholders, tends to be less crowded.

Down the road from Kaneohe Bay at Mini Putt Golf at Bay View, golfers can choose between two spacious contoured courses of different levels of difficulty or even play through both, back-to-back.

"With Bay View, the size is great, and it's more of a traditional golf course, with the waterfalls, nature, and leaves on the course. I really enjoyed the size and layout of the Bay View course," Leonhard said.

The Pali course is geared more toward families and the beginner miniature golfer, with a water hazard; cave feature, cascading waterfall, and even putting through huts. There were two unexpected and unforeseeable hazards on the Pali course. As a few golfers discovered, too late, holes 7 and 13 will not relinquish balls. The LikeLike course offers more of a challenge for the more serious golfer. The course is lined with water hazards and is just as beautiful as the Pali course, with a stream running alongside as well as a waterfall at one point. This course also has the added benefit of being wheelchair accessible. The facilities at Bay View also include a snack shop, an arcade and a party room for birthdays and other get-togethers.

For an unusual twist to the game, how about playing in the dark? At Glow Putt, an indoor course located on the third floor at Ala Moana Shopping Center in Honolulu, part of the fun is not being able to see all the hazards on the course and for that matter, each other. But thanks to the black lights, glow in the dark paint, and putters and golf balls that also glow in the dark, the course is clearly visible. Fluorescent trees scattered throughout the course, as well as fluorescent posters of wild animals lining the walls, create a fun and interesting ambiance. Visitors are given a glow bracelet before beginning the course. At the end, all golfers have a chance of winning a flashing LED magnetic pin by sinking their ball in the pink hole at the 18th hole. Glow Putt currently does not offer a party area, but that will be remedied as soon as they move into their new 8,000 plus square foot, stroller-friendly location at the Windward Mall in Kaneohe on July 20.

The lushly landscaped course at Jungle River is complete with animal bones in a tarpit, simulated bird calls, running streams and as Leonhard noted, "You can't tell you're next to a parking lot." This partially hidden course is found at the Diamond Head end of the parking lot that also services Toys 'R' Us in Aiea, in Phase III of the Pearlridge Shopping Mall.

"What really surprised me at Jungle River is the lushness and intimacy of the course, and the very unique experience of dodging in and out of rain showers," Leonhard said, chuckling. True to its name, a few mosquitoes can also be found lurking, waiting for unsuspecting visitors. But don't worry, if you forget to bring mosquito repellent, just ask the staff for some.

The pastime of miniature golf has come a long, long way since it's inception in the mid-1900s. One thing that has not changed is the laughter and fun people share at the courses that keeps them coming back for more.

How about hitting all five courses in a day? "It's a pretty cool experience," Leonhard said, grinning.

MCCS counts down BayFest

Join the convoy of fest goers to Kaneohe Bay, Friday through July 4, as the community joins the United States Marine Corps for McKenna Motors BayFest 2005.

This year, BayFest is offering quite possibly the biggest headlining musical entertainment the island will have to offer. Live on the stage will be Grammy-nominated mainland chart toppers, Papa Roach, the high-powered country duo Montgomery Gentry, country strumming and singing sensation, Brad Paisley, and unquestionably one of the most influential bands in rock ‘n’ roll history, Lynyrd Skynyrd.

Laying the foundation for four evenings of melodic madness will be Hawaii’s native son John Cruz, the local’s festival favorite “Go Jimmy Go,” Florida’s country pride Rick Monroe, Dita Holifield and Red Handed, Scott Wallace, Upstanding Youth, Slug, Ghost, and the Marine Forces Pacific Band.

What’s the Fourth of July weekend without fireworks you ask? BayFest 2005 will showcase the world-famous Grucci Brothers fireworks each evening, including the largest Fourth of July fireworks show this island will see. If the Grucci Brothers are good enough for the Olympics and the president, they’re good enough for BayFest.

Check out the Marines and their machines including: planes, helicopters, tanks, amphibious assault vehicles, artillery, and the greatest weapon of the Corps, the Marines themselves. Experience and meet the service members who keep us safe and free.

The Island Lifestyle Expo, with displays, games, giveaways and vendors, will be held inside Hangar 101 on Marine Corps Base Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay. Check out exhibits, displays and games — especially the McKenna Motors paper-airplane contest where contestants can enter for the opportunity to take home a brand-new Ford Thunderbird from McKenna Motors.

Last year more than 38,000 people came to MCB Hawaii and rocked out to live performances, got crazy with games and contests, went wild in the water and filled their holiday weekend with festivity. This year we have all that and more.

BayFest is always filled with exhilarating events that relate to all interests. The wild ones can get their kicks at the BayFest mixed martial arts “Superbrawl.” Get ready to get wet at the build your own boat, Bathtub Regatta race, and enjoy the crowd favorite — BodySearch Fitness Contest.

For patrons who relish relaxation, BayFest will be filled with family fun such as the All Hawaii Cruises Coconut Island Boat Rides, Papa John’s Pizza-Eating Contest, AAA Hawaii Exotic Car Show, the McKenna Motors New Car Show and more. No BayFest is complete without Fernandez Events Carnival rides for everyone.

BayFest hits Kaneohe Bay Friday through July 4. Gates open at 5 p.m. on Friday and at noon starting July 2, with military demonstrations, contests and E.K. Fernandez carnival rides. Concerts start at 9:15 p.m. followed by a huge Grucci Brothers fireworks show each night. Tickets are available online at www.bayfesthawaii.com, www.Ticketmaster.com, at all Ticketmaster outlets including Times Supermarkets (walk in service only), Blaisdell Box Office and Brigham Young University. To charge tickets by phone, call (877) 750-4400. For complete information, log on to www.bayfesthawaii.com.

McKenna Motors BayFest is an annual event organized by Marine Corps Community Services and is open to the public. Proceeds from this event enhance the quality of life for the Marines, Sailors and their family members stationed aboard Marine Corps Base Hawaii. No backpacks, coolers, weapons or outside food or drinks will be allowed.

Sailing Lessons: If you’ve always wanted to sail our spectacular Kaneohe Bay, here’s your chance. Come to the Base Marina from July 11 to July 15 from 5 p.m. until dark and learn to master the secrets of the seven seas ... well, almost. Classes will cover the basics of sailing and the certification requirements that will get you sailing your own vessel. Cost is only $25 per person, but with a 10-person limit, space is bound to fill up fast. Registration deadline is July 6. For details or to sign up, call 254-7593.

Volunteer Opportunities
McKenna Motors BayFest 2005 will be blasting the base from Friday through July 4, but without volunteers, it cannot be done.

Volunteers are needed for everything, but especially the Dunk Tank, Striker and Jousting Competition. These opportunities are open to all hands. Contact Gabby Black, at 254-7593, for task requirements, shifts and other information. Volunteers are also needed before and after BayFest. Marines, Sailors, civilian employees and family members willing to volunteer should contact the MCCS Personnel Office at 254-7632, Marine and Family Services at 257-7777 or MCCS Marketing at 254-7679 for details.

Bull riders called to compete at BayFest

Yibeli Galindo-Baird

If you think riding a mechanical bull is easier than riding the real beast, come to McKenna Motors BayFest Mechanical Bull-Riding contests and prove your worth as a cowboy or cowgirl.

The contests, for active duty members only, will take place July 2 and 3 from 6 to 7 p.m. Christopher Sereno, the event organizer, is eager to see contestants make the most of their eight-second ride. “There are some very excited folks who have taken part in rodeos on the mainland who are eager to take part in this contest,” Sereno said. He notes that there is such interest in this event that on the first day the application flyers were available, interested participants were already at the Information, Tickets and Tours office, where Sereno is the manager, signing up.

On Friday, from 6 to 7 p.m., a practice session will be held for all “wannabe” champions to get a feel for the tempo of the mechanical beast.

If you are a seeded rider, want to show off your chaps, or feel you have what it takes to take on a few competitors, come on July 2 to show off to your fellow Marines during the Marine Corps Contest. Members from other services can sign up to compete on July 3 in the Joint Services Contest. The winner of each contest will receive a commemorative BayFest ‘05 buckle, custom created for this event.

Fill out an application at your Base ITT office or call 254-7563. Only 25 participants can take part in each contest, so be sure to sign up soon. There is no charge for registering, but all contestants must sign a waiver of liability. A firm grip will also help.

Gates open at 5 p.m. on Friday and at noon starting July 2. Other attractions include military demonstrations, contests and E.K. Fernandez carnival rides. Concerts start at 9:15 p.m. followed by the world-famous Grucci Brothers fireworks show each night.

Tickets are available online at Ticketmaster.com, at all Ticketmaster outlets including Times Supermarkets (walk in service only), Blaisdell Box Office, and Brigham Young University. Deployment

How the Grinch stole reunion

Michele Adams-Thompson
Hawaii Army Weekly

Last of a 9-part series

Resisting the inevitable takes so much energy, but we do it anyway. It doesn't make sense to take two trips to the convenience store in order to avoid a big trip to the commissary, but I confess sometimes I do this. I know the big trip is unavoidable, but I still resist it.

This little piece of resistance costs me both time and money but, in the scheme of things, it's a small expense. However, resisting the inevitable can cost much more under certain circumstances. For example, putting off a trip to the doctor when you sense something might really be wrong — now, that can be expensive. Here's another one: Resisting change, the kind of changes we know are inevitable in our Marine or Sailor or ourselves over the course of a year, for example.

If the recent research on military families and long recurring deployments tells us anything, it tells us this: Every one of us and every one of our Marines or Sailors has changed in the course of the deployment. I think we resist accepting the implications of this for lots of reasons, but one of the big ones has to be that we want things to be like they were when our spouse left. We want him or her home, and we want to get back to normal. If we have to factor in how we've all changed, we just won't know what to make of the picture, so we resist this idea somewhat.

But we resist a straw man here. Humans respond and adapt to what's going on around them. Change, by itself, isn't the enemy to watch out for, but unrealistic expectations might be. If we indulge them or even if we just allow them to go unchecked and unexamined, they can rob us of a healthy, happy reunion the way the Grinch stole Christmas.

Along with developing realistic expectations, military families who've been through reunion after a long deployment in recent years have two other big recommendations for us: Take the process slow and determine to be patient. This isn't too hard, I'm thinking. After all, I'm fine on patience, just as long as I have time for it! And I can take things slowly if I have to, just as long as things are going my way!

Ok, so maybe I'll have to give all this a little more thought and practice. Do any of us have the wisdom to keep expectations realistic, the maturity to take reunion slowly or all the restraint required for being patient? Probably not, but it helps to know what we should be aiming for and to get started in the right direction as soon as possible.

Our Marines and Sailors will be attending the Warrior Transition Program prior to and during their return from deployment. Marine & Family Services offers a similar program with a focus coming from the families' perspective. This program is called From Combat to Home Life. The program is free and offers free child-care with advanced registration. Why would anyone miss out on information that can make such a difference in reunion? We can keep the Grinch from stealing a happy reunion from our families.

For answers to reunion questions, call Marine & Family Services at 257-7786.

HSL-37 hosts first Family Safety Fair

Lt. j.g. Michael Maier
Helicopter Antisubmarine Squadron Light 37

The Helicopter Antisubmarine Squadron Light 37 Safety Department, headed up by Lt. Cmdr. Chris Pfister, recently organized and hosted an extremely successful Safety Fair. Members of HSL-37 and their families enjoyed numerous safety-oriented activities and learning stations set up by representatives from Kailua and Marine Corps Base Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay.

There were activities for adults and children alike. One of the crowd favorites for the adults was the impaired driver go-cart. Drivers navigated through a cone course while a safety representative used a remote control to command the specially designed go-cart to have a delayed response to the driver's control inputs, simulating an impaired condition. Another adult favorite was the "drunk goggles." Participants donned special goggles that impaired the user's vision and sense of balance. They were then put through a standard roadside sobriety test, often with humorous results.

Motorcycle riders got a chance to refresh their skills with a motorcycle safety course followed by a group ride to town and lunch.

Children enjoyed the bicycle safety station. They learned how to check their bikes properly before riding and other important bike safety tips. Then they put their new knowledge to the test by riding through a cone course.

Another favorite with the children was the interactive electric safety diorama. They were given some important tips on electricity in and around the home.

Other activities included training on how to properly use a fire extinguisher, identity theft protection, poison control information and general water safety.

One of the highlights of the fair was a door prize given away by Ocean Concepts of Honolulu: two free dives and one dive certification course.

According to HSL-37 safety representatives, the event was a success and everyone walked away with more safety knowledge. Everyone in squadron's safety department recognizes that safety on and off the job is crucial to mission accomplishment, and the fair was another testament to sustaining a strong safety culture.

Nominees for 100 Honolulu Honorees Sought

The City & County of Honolulu is 100 years old and the centennial will be celebrated between July 2005 and July 2006.

The Honolulu Centennial Commission and Honolulu Magazine are accepting nominations from the public for 100 Honolulu citizens, “The 100 Honolulu Honorees,” living or deceased, who have made lasting contributions to the city and county, its life and its culture.

Nominees should be individuals who spent at least a significant portion of their lives in the city and county of Honolulu from 1905 to 2005. The categories are as follows: agriculture, business (visitor industry, manufacturing, commerce and trade, finance, communications, entrepreneurship etc.), culture and arts, education, entertainment, environment, Hawaiian history and culture, high tech, labor, media, medicine/health and wellness, military, philanthropy, politics/government, religion/spirituality, sports, non-profit organization, other (specify).

To nominate a candidate, submit the following information to Honolulu 100, 1600 Kapiolani Blvd., Suite 1000, Honolulu, Hawaii 96814: nominee's name, date of his/her birth, category, essay of 250 words or less on why you are nominating this person, photograph of person nominated.

The deadline for nominations is July 8.

Honorees will be recognized at the Centennial Gala, to be held at the Sheraton Waikiki Hotel on Nov. 17, and in Honolulu Magazine's November Holiday Annual issue.

“Honolulu has such a rich history and is home to many people of different cultures who, over the past century, have contributed to Honolulu's position as one of the most dynamic cities in the world,” said Linda Wong, vice chair of the Centennial Commission and a member of the selection panel.

For more information, call 523-4674; e-mail moca-info@honolulu.gov; or write to HONOLULU 100, c/o Mayor's Office of Culture and the Arts, 530 S. King St., Room 404, Honolulu, HI 96813.

Public Invited to Explore Reptiles

Bishop Museum will host a series of fun and engaging games every Saturday, through Sept. 10, in conjunction with the “Reptiles: Real and Robotic” exhibit now on display at the museum.

The exhibit tells the story of how these feared, complex and often misunderstood creatures have evolved through history. Through larger-than-life robotic reptile models and interactive displays, this exhibit celebrates reptiles as ancient survivors of a once primitive Earth. Visitors can explore the origin and history of an array of reptiles and take a look at the state of their survival.

The intrepid can crawl like a crocodile, slither like a snake, and even challenge themselves in the Reptile Rumble. After experiencing the exhibit, put your knowledge of these cold-blooded creatures to the test in a fun, new, interactive game from 10:30 a.m. through 2:30 p.m.

Admission is $14.95 for adults; $11.95 for youth 4 to 12 and seniors; and free for children under 4 and Bishop Museum members. Kamaaina and military discounts are also available.

For more details, call 847-3511 or visit www.bishopmuseum.org.

Charlie Murphy to Perform at Concert Hall

The Laugh Factory presents “Charlie Murphy and Friends” from the hit “Chappelle's Show” for one performance only, Friday, in the Blaisdell Concert Hall.

As a member of the supporting cast of “Chappelle's Show,” Murphy is quickly emerging as its breakout star, largely due to his outrageously autobiographical tales about working as a bodyguard for his famous brother, Eddie Murphy, in the 1980s. Dubbed “Charlie Murphy's True Hollywood Stories,” the recurring sketches are a highlight of the Comedy Central series' stellar second season.

Murphy also has achieved success as a Hollywood screenwriter — “Vampire in Brooklyn” and “Paper Soldiers” — and as an actor in films — Snoop Dogg's “Murder Was the Case,” “Jungle Fever,” “Mo' Better Blues” and “Harlem Nights.” He has toured on the U.S. Comedy Club circuit, and has appeared on national television programs.

Tickets cost $30, $40 and $50 and can be purchased at the Blaisdell Box Office and all Ticketmaster outlets. To charge-by-phone, call (877) 750-4400 or visit www.ticketmaster.com.

4-H Invites Public to Farm Fair

4-H members will feature their livestock in the second annual Hawaii 4-H Farm Fair which will be held at Kualoa Ranch today through Sunday and is open to the general public. Fair hours will be from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. today and Saturday, and from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Admission and parking will be free.

4-H members from across the state will show their swine, dairy, beef and lamb projects. 4-H Market Swine and Beef shows will take place Thursday at 9:30 am. The 4-H Market Lamb and Dairy Show will follow on the same day at 1 pm. The Market Swine and Beef Showmanship event will take place today, at 9:30 am, and the Market Lamb and Dairy Showmanship event will follow the same day at 1 pm. The purpose of the showmanship contest is to determine how well each 4-H member is able to handle his or her animal. On Saturday, an auction of dairy, beef, swine and lamb will be held at 1 p.m.

4-H members participating in this event are from 9 through 19 years old. As part of their project, members have raised their animals and maintained project records. The livestock show is the culmination of their project work.

Besides the livestock show, the fair will also feature 4-H fashion and cooking displays, food booths, games for children, a farmer's market, craft vendors, displays of local agricultural products, a chili cook-off on Saturday, preserve and pie-making contests that are open to the public, corn on-the-cob and watermelon eating contests, nightly entertainment, 4-H hands on learning experiences and other educational programs.

Bishop Museum to Host Comet Collision Viewing

In celebration of the Jan. 12 NASA launch that set a space probe on a collision course with comet Tempel 1, Bishop Museum will host a comet collision viewing party July 3 at 7:50 p.m.

The comet and space probe collision is hoped to produce a spectacular celestial show visible in the evening skies of Hawaii.

Stargazers and space explorers alike are invited to bring their binoculars and telescopes to Bishop Museum to enjoy “Comet Collision Countdown.” Space experts and members of the Hawaiian Astronomical Society will be on campus to point guests in the right direction with the naked eye and with the use of their state-of-the-art telescopes.

Event goers can also enjoy a selection of space adventures and fun with hands-on activities, planetarium and Star Lab shows, ono food, and more. Astronomers from the UH Institute for Astronomy also will present special lectures every half hour, beginning at 5:30 p.m. Presenters and topics featured include:

Toby Owen — “Did Comet Showers Cause Our Flowers?”

Gareth Wynn-Williams — “Deep Impact — An Overview”

Mark Willman — “Searching for New Earths”

Jeff Morgan — “Pan-Starrs: A New Way to Search for Near-Earth Objects”

The historic NASA mission was designed to collect information that may reveal answers to the formation and evolution of our solar system. The copper-fortified probe is designed to obliterate itself without the use of explosives after it collides with the comet at 23,000 mph, creating a crater in the comet's surface large enough to swallow the Roman Coliseum.

Before the impact, the comet will be too faint to see without a telescope or good binoculars, but it will be near two bright objects, the star Spica and the planet Jupiter. At impact, astronomers anticipate that the impact will probably be visible to the naked eye. The impact itself should produce a brief flash while the ejected material should remain illuminated by the sun for hours or even days.

The event will be held from 5:30 to 10 p.m. Admission is $3 and free for Bishop Museum members and children under age 3.

For more info, call 847-3511 or visit www.bishopmuseum.org.

Na Palapalai to Perform at Waikiki Aquarium

Na Hoku Hanohano award-winning trio Na Palapalai will take the stage under the stars on Tuesday for the first of five Ke Kani O Ke Kai summer concerts at the Waikiki Aquarium. With proceeds to benefit a future Northwestern Hawaiian Islands exhibit at the Aquarium, the concert will also feature signature food items by Tiki's Grill & Bar, and fun, educational activities surrounding the endangered Hawaiian monk seals. In addition, dancers from Sonny Ching's renowned hula halau will accompany Na Palapalai on some of their songs.

Na Palapalai members are world-renowned for their ability to capture the magic of Hawaii's nostalgic falsetto sound. In 2002, the group won the hearts of many in Hawaii with its debut record “Makani OluOlu,” which took home five Na Hoku Hanohano awards, including Album of the Year. Their second album, “Ke Ala Beauty,” features a combination of five original songs and rare Hawaiian classics won them Group and Album of the Year at the 2005 Na Hoku Hanohano awards.

Offering a sunset picnic on the Aquarium lawn, Tiki's Grill & Bar has created a special menu for concert goers, including swordfish kabobs, rocking vegetable sticks, Tiki's chicken Caesar, keiki turkey wraps served in a flying disc, and Chef Ron's gourmet cupcakes. All items are priced less than $8. In addition, the Aquarium's staff has developed a fun, abbreviated talk surrounding one of the region's rare inhabitants, the endangered Hawaiian monk seal. Special take-home crafts for keiki will also be available.

Concert goers are encouraged to arrive early for optimal seating. Doors open at 5:30 p.m. with educational activities offered from 6 p.m. and the concert starting at 7 p.m. Aquarium galleries and exhibits will remain open through the evening.

Ke Kani O Ke Kai continues through the summer with: Hapa, July 12; Na Leo Pilimehana, July 26; Keola Beamer, Aug. 9; and IONA Contemporary Dance Theatre, Aug. 23.

Tickets are $18 for adults, $10 for ages 7 to 12, and free for children 6 and under and $15/$7 for Friends of Waikiki Aquarium “FOWA” members. FOWA members also enjoy special concert series pricing of $60 for all five concerts. Food will be sold separately at a nominal fee.

For tickets or more information, call 923-9741 or visit www.waquarium.org.
